AUTHOR: UN Women, ATHENA Network
DATE: 2010
PUBLISHER: UN Women, ATHENA Network

This publication is intended to spark greater attention and inclusion of women, particularly those most affected by HIV and AIDS, as agents of change and experts through their experience. Through an analysis of information provided through interviews with over 100 key informants as well as global surveys and several case studies, it attempts to identifying where and in what ways women, particularly those most affected by the epidemic, are participating in the response. The report provides recommendations aimed at national governments, funders, and other institutional leaders highlighting obstacles to women's full and meaningful participation and stressing the need for a sustained commitment to ensuring women as agents of change in the AIDS response. It is second in a series of resource guides intended to promote strategies for the incorporation of gender equality and women's rights in the AIDS response.

Article can be accessed on-line here in English, here in French, here in Spanish, here in Russian.

To view PDF documents you will need to download and install Adobe Acrobat Reader. The program is available for free through the Adobe website, download here . More help is available on PDF documents and Adobe Acrobat Reader here.