

Cultural Stereotypes Remain Major Hurdles in AIDS Battle

In a remote village in South Nyanza District, western Kenya, Lawrence Orawa is known as "jater", (loosely translated as widow cleanser). His work is to perform a sexual act with women whose husbands have passed away, a ritual meant to "cleanse" the home and chase away "evil spirits". Read more...