The Bureau for Africa/Office of Sustainable Development (OSD), U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) sponsored a December 18, 2001 Technical Update on the Female Condom as a forum for sharing the latest scientific and programmatic information on the female condom. Family Health International (FHI) organized the meeting, working in collaboration with Population Council, Population Services International (PSI), and the Female Health Company. The meeting was part of an information dissemination initiative on the female condom, supported by OSD. Participants included representatives from agencies responsible for family planning service delivery, sexually transmitted infection (STI)/HIV control, women's advocacy, public health research, and reproductive health service policymaking. The participant packet included research briefs prepared by FHI on critical issues and other background information. This report tracks the agenda of the meeting (Appendix.)
